“ I want to share a memory or two but there are so many that are forever etched in my mind it would be impossible pick which is the best. The time i spent with my cousin Marty was some of the best time in my life and a huge part of who I am today. We did crazy fun happy things. Marty seemed to know how to live life to its fullest in almost every moment. She never beat around the bush about things either one good example of that is this; Back several years ago when our kids were little we both worked at Craft House in Kalkaska. It was early summer and the weather had been kind of rainy and dull and on one particular Friday the sun came out and it was warm and beautiful. You know the kind of day you just live for, the kind of day that is perfect in every way as far as Michigan weather goes. Well, on that day we just could not stand to be closed up inside working for another moment, so we decided when we went to lunch we were not going to go back to work afterwards. Naturally we had to call the boss to let him know we weren't coming back but we had to have a good reason. Since we really didn't have what was considered a "good reason", we had to come up with one. Plan A. We decided we tell him we had an emergency. I guess we hoped the word "emergency" would be enough to get us off the hook for a full blown explanation. So Marty gets on the pay phone in front of Pik Kwick store in Kalkaska, calls the boss up tells him neither one of us are coming back because we have and emergency. After a pause. he says with genuine concerned; "What kind of emergency?" (He knew we were cousins so he probably was imagining some huge family crisis occurring). At this point, realizing the plan A did not quite work, Marty decides it was time for plan B. Soooo, Marty tells him, "well there is so much sun all over out here someone has to soak it up and it might as well be us so we won't be back today." He was laughing pretty hard when he hung up the phone.

“ There are way to many memories to count and each and every one of them were unique in their own way. Never a dull moment!! Her friendship was a true treasure for me and she was loved and will be deeply missed.

“ Marty you are now amongst the angels. I remember our long talks on the school bus. I knew your oldest girls. We shared so much in such a little time. Rest in Peace my friend.

“ When I think of Martha, I hear her voice, and in that voice I hear her talking about her daughters and babies and husband and dog, the whole family. It was easy to hear in that voice how much she loved each of them. Rest in peace, Martha.
