“ What Buddy may have lacked in education, he more than made up for in simple rules he followed. He loved to be with people so he used the bus, his bike, or just walked to be with them. He loved music, so he listened. He loved his Wii so he played. He loved to cook and eat and did them both with Gusto! He had a job, and tried his best. He enjoyed learning new things and had a wonderful smile when he thought he'd done it right. Just the week before his heart attack, he asked me why everyone couldn't just be nice. He said he was trying to read the bible, and he thought if you went to church and read the bible you should be kinder to people. HE'S ABSOLUTELY RIGHT! Thomas Michael Lambert, "BUDDY", has left some pretty big shoes to fill, and an imprint on every heart who loved him!

“ Brian went to school with Buddy and Buddy was his first roommate at the CLA apartments. Although they went separate ways, their friendship lasted through the years. Buddy and Brian would ride thier bikes all over. Buddy would stay overnight with Brian and they would play Wii games - bowling in particular - and watch movies. He was a great friend. Buddy was always up beat, had a quick smile and loved to tell you what was up. He will be missed.

“ I worked with Buddy for several years at Randy's Diner. What a joy he was to work with! He was a hard worker, always eager to help and ALWAYS did it with a smile! I am so blessed to have had the opportunity to know such a good man... Heaven now has a new angel... I am sure that's what the rainbows were about.
